GARY'S CORNER

Just a reminder to everyone: if you are not familiar with my online mini-course, “The Bible and History,” sponsored by the Allen and Joan Bildner Center for the Study of Jewish Life at Rutgers University, we invite you to explore and discover:

The Bible and History with Professor Gary A. Rendsburg

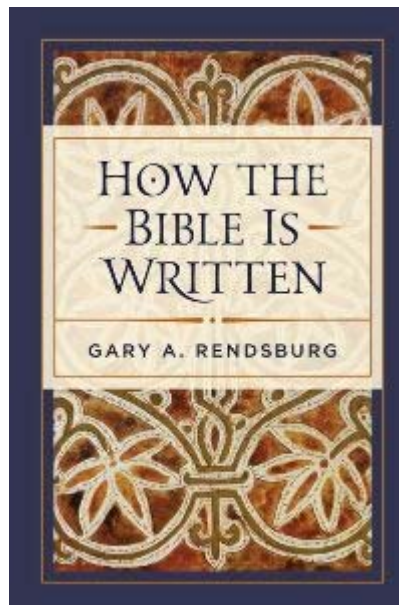

Almost three thousand years ago, a small group of ancient Israelite literati wrote the major narrative that spans the biblical books of Genesis through Kings, creating what may be called the world's first history. The narrative focuses on the people of Israel, but because the history of Israel constantly intersected with the surrounding countries, the Bible gives us a veritable tour of the ancient Near East. Great powers such as Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, and Persia, and lesser powers such as the Philistines and the Phoenicians, all make an appearance in the Bible's pages.

One must register, but the registration is free:
